A pretty home wedding took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Margaret Faith in Le Droit Park. The contracting parties were her daughter, Margaret, and Mr. William Edward Saunders. No cards were issued and only the immediate friends witnessed the impressive ceremony performed by Rev. Joseph T. Kelly, D. D., of the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

The tall, fair bride wore a handsome costume of blue silk, shot with gold and elaborately trimmed with lace and velvet. A bouquet of La France roses, tied with pink ribbon, added to the charming effect. Her going-away gown was a dainty one of blue cloth, with hat to match.

After the ceremony a party was enjoyed at a wedding luncheon before the happy pair left for the South, where their honeymoon will be spent.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Saunders will be at home to their friends at No. 1848 Fifth street northeast.

Invitations have been issued to the marriage of Miss Margaret Belle Blaine, niece of the late James O. Blaine, to Dr. Henry J. Crosson, of this city. The ceremony will take place at St. Peter's Church Tuesday evening, November 12. On their return from a wedding tour which will include a visit to Atlanta, Dr. and Mrs. Crosson will make their home here.

NIGHT OF ELFS AND WITCHES

Halloween Celebrated With Spells and Gaieties.

Caledonians Gathered and Drunk
Toasts While Young Folks Celebrated with Parties and Dances.

If superstition be not only superstition, spirits walked the earth last night, gnomes treated the world to levity, spirits made merry, elfins ran riot, gnomes took their annual outing, and fairies had their in-ning.

Last night was Halloween, or the eve preceding the feast day of All Saints. It was also October 31, a night on which, according to the ancients, ghosts barst their censures to revile the glimmers of the moon. Exactly why ghosts should select October 31 as the evening on which to cast themselves up again, is not clear, though the ancients believed they did it. They believed that these spirits threw stones, sprinkled flour, unhinged gates, peeped passively, and otherwise behaved in an uncanny manner.

It was also the evening when devils got in their best looks on humankind and when witches worked terrible incantations, spread spells broadcast, brewed infernal decoctions, and quivered everything in sight. This night was a night to be remembered. It did it again. Old women and young men, who quailed at the catapiling mouth, who could walk on red hot iron, and bear a shield in war, feared to venture from their own fireside lest these wandering witches should "do" them with an incantation, or bewitch them with a spell. It was the carnival of the devil.

It came down through the ages and was the directed of its horrors. People began to refer to it as a "fake." Then it became a day of laughter, jest and prank.

The local Scots themselves gave way to glee, and the Caledonian Club observed the night with mirth and music, song and story, dancing and refreshments. The Caledonians met at Costello's Hall, and, although their prearranged programme was somewhat deranged by the weather, yet they listened to songs from Mr. and Mrs. Woodhead, and Clarence Robinson, Nicholson, Jardine and Cochrane. After the flow of reason came the feast of body, and at this banquet more songs were rendered and toasts delivered. Vice Chief William A. Taylor presided, dancing closed the gaieties.

All Halloween, or All Hallowmas, is the old English name for the feast of All Saints and all martyrs. The real festival of All Saints was regularly instituted by Gregory the Great in 609. It was admitted into the fourth century the Greek Church appointed the Sunday after Easter as the day for the commemoration of martyrs generally.

The Roman Catholic Church introduced a similar festival in A. D. 610, when the old heathen Parthenon was converted to Mary and all martyrs. The real festival of All Saints was regularly instituted by Gregory the Great in 609. It was admitted into the fourth century the Greek Church appointed the Sunday after Easter as the day for the commemoration of martyrs generally.
